Some of you often slouch up to us in the streets and say, with foul sarcastic leers, "HEY guys, what's with all this New Square Leaflet jive, what's the scam?" And we say, with a gentle shimmy and quick sidestep, that truly 'tis just to bring the young people Glad Tidings of Good Things Coming oh and OK maybe to show a human face and gain sympathy (for why should we suffer in silent squalor just to bring light to your dim world?) on days when Him Next Door finally goes completely bonkers, knocks all remaining walls into scattered rubble heaps, sets fire to the front garden, builds a breeze-block igloo where the trees used to be and happily hurls down slates to explode by our door while I cower busily for my life over makeshift post-Apocalyptic elevelenses and try to come to grips with new mail-order prices which I know some of you think mean we've sold out, success champagne-bubbling to our heads and every other vacant extremity but it's HONESTLY NOT TRUE, it's still the lovable little cottage industry held up with rubber-bands-&-sticky-tape you've known and abused so long and if anyone seriously disagrees, we suggest you chat to one of the girls in our Customer Care Dept. - dial 100 and ask for Freefone SARAH - and if you'd still like to quibble with anything we do and generally tear us off a strip, there's a tear-off strip below. Trouble is, the only way to not change is to deliberately restrict sales... and really, are we here just to occasionally disrupt your mucky lives in a joyous myriad of heretofore unimagined ways that leave you breathless, shaking, dripping and distraught, a total emotional jelly, or to make a few bob to enjoy while we're still young and still have the best part of a roof over our heads? CRASH. Damn.

By the way, for those who keep writing to ask how to set-up a record company, the one we always fall for is where you get all our friends hiding in the bedroom with the lights out then invite us round for a game of strip consequences.

I WOULD LIKE TO QUIBBLE WITH A LOT OF WHAT SARAH RECORDS DOES
