"Red and yellow buses trickle down past Redcliffe church and loll like giant, rectangular beach-balls in the sun" - a nice, inspiring sort of image with which to begin, I think, full of splendid, quasi-spiritual overtones; apt, because today we shall dwell upon the morally contentious issue of emotional blackmail, a subject dear to both our hearts.

You see - heavily disguised, we have been moving amongst you. Remember the cheery porter who beat you best-of-three at Battleships in the buffet at Parkway that night the last train to Gloucester left oddly early? And that sad little man who came to "see about the hats" last week when your parents were out? And what about that new Schwartz herb-and-spice display-rack in ASDA, the one that followed you through the checkout and offered to wheel your trolley? "Reconnaissance", we call it. And what we've discovered is that some of you - no names - are beginning to mutter darkly around the pubs and discotheques that the disappearance of certain catalogue numbers from our list is nothing less than a crass attempt at rewriting history - that certain bands are becoming, as it were, Non-Bands - guitars painted-out from the SARAH holiday-snaps, T-shirts subtly altered by addition of the words "I've never heard of"... And why would we do this? POWER, it seems. Because a Band that Never Was could hardly object if, for example, its entire back-catalogue were suddenly reissued on unexpected double LP compilations...

So, to nip these silly Orwellian sub-plots in the bud, some FACTS. Quite simply, we felt that to keep flaunting the existence of items unobtainable except perhaps by resorting to "unsubtle" worded classifications in the Personal Services columns of Record Collector was utterly irresponsible - deprivation should never be mocked and that kind of smug gloating just causes resentment and hostility which in turn leads to public disorder and violence - as I write, south and central Los Angeles are already in flames - OK, possibly more due to gross hypocrisy in the Californian courts and decades of racial injustice than the lack of early Sea Urchins 7"s in Tower Records on Sunset but - it's nonetheless a timely reminder of what can happen when things get out of perspective and we really don't want to be encouraging that sort of thing because - well, obviously we're role models for an awful lot of you, and that means accepting certain responsibilities and - well, I really hate how the gold paint on the wing gets scratched swerving through the burning dustbins.

The truth is, we've released too many records. People have often said this - "A few said it just after "Bristine Christine" came out; but they are no longer with us. And - well, we'd rather spend our money on pressing new exciting young records than have it tied up for 10 years in old fuddy-duddy ones that hardly anybody buys now anyway so - we hereby declare that we shan't be repressing ANY of the first 32 SARAHs - once what's in stock sells out, that's your lot, no more, ever. Ya boo.

But please don't ask us what will sell-out first - because we'll only lie. And because, although we know roughly what's on our shelves here at home, we haven't a clue what lurks in the dingier corners of the Revolver warehouse and nor, frankly, have they. So, to get back to this emotional blackmail thing, what we're saying is: please buy all our records straight away, otherwise you might NEVER be able to buy them, and you'll feel absolutely wretched for the next fifty, sixty years or so.

Thank you.
