Hullo, it's Spanish Week here at SARAH HQ - Expo, The Olympics, Barcelona beating those awful Italians - how could we fail to be roused? So, hands across the ocean, we've clad ourselves in traditional Iberian garb, a schooner of fino slop, beside me, castanets lie oiled and ready - I do feel we need a more international outlook; it's far too easy to get set in one's ways and start believing there's not really much point to Denmark, say - when there's probably quite a bit. I worry we don't do all we could to encourage mutual respect and understanding among nations.

But then I stop and think of all we have done. Take this background photo; OK, so it's the railway bridge on Windmill Close (with the Bristol-Exeter line going over the top, and the path to ASDA underneath) - so what? Well, it's ALSO Nb.64 on the Sarah Tourist Map of Bristol...

"The Sarah Tourist Map of Bristol?" you shout, "what in the devil's name is that?" Well, at the moment, rather like the Sarah in-house video-production unit and the Sarah Duckwatch Scheme, it remains somewhat hypothetical; but that doesn't mean we're not still bloody proud of the big part we've played in putting Bristol firmly on the tourist-trail. Example: just 2 years after it featured on the SARAH 21-30 label series, passenger-miles on the Severn Beach line have more than DOUBLED - almost entirely down to BR's new SARAH Tripper Tickets. OK, so maybe you'll now get stuck at Avonmouth while some daft Swiss snapper insists on sitting precisely where the SARAH photographer sat to take that classic SARAH 23 label shot (having even tracked down the same green filter...) - but look at the plus side - a Greek-style taverna on the platform at Shirehampton, a Finnish theme pub nesting amongst the pines at Stapleton Road -

In fact, I was standing at the bar there just the other night when my pal KEVIN came up, slapped me on the shoulder and said: "What would you like then, old son?" And I said: "Well, harmony between all nations would be rather nice, Kevin; and maybe an immediate end to the terrible war and famine in Sudan; global socialist revolution, no more animal experimentation, a ban on the use of dolphins in seltotape manufacture - but mostly, I guess, I'd just like to have all my achievements recognised worldwide - you know, TV tributes, old girlfriends, dregged-up for contentious late-night specials, little blue plaques outside places I've slept - well, maybe not that youth hostel in Saffron Walden" - I caught his sceptical glare - "they get them to hold the little cardboard ring, Kev - while they wind the tape on; and it's not easy, not with flippers."

I don't have many ambitions; but worldwide recognition of all my achievements - medals, statues, all the shallow meaningless little relationships that generally accompany Fame on its unsteady swagger through the dimly lit bowdries of public affection - that'd be great. To be able to don some simple, durable disguise, wander the streets of this, my adopted home, and find everywhere young people conversing deeply in wild exotic tongues - and know that they're talking about me - ahhh, I digress; for now, I seek merely to spread the word that this a great and glorious city, full of magical corners, shady crooks, secluded nannies -

But cheap picture-postcard shots of cathedrals and bridges - that's not our style. Instead, these photos are your clues to where we may be found - these are our haunts, our enchanted places, our breeding grounds. I'm not sure I mean breeding grounds...
