Once upon a time, that part of Somerset lying directly underneath this house used to be a coal-mine - the old Bedminster Main Seam - and sometimes when I lay - or - beat at night - imagine I hear once again the terrible tramp-tramp of hob-nail boots a-marching on down to the pit-head - the whinny of the pit-ponies, the chirrup of those budgerigars they used to take down with them to, um - something to do with the methane - I forget what, but I know budgerigars are big on it - actually, it's canaries, you're right - anyway, all marching down to Dean Lane Colliery and I think - my God, wouldn't they absolutely spit on people like us, sitting up here with our lovely clean hands and our shiny buffed nails, making a living out of boys-with-guitars, and then having the cheek to complain -

But complain we do. Incidentally.

Why? Well - to continue the above train of thought - the simple fact is that, should you ever be confronted by a straight choice between a job in the music industry and a job hacking coal from a solid rockface half a mile underground then take my advice and DON'T plump for wasting the best years of your life crawling around half-naked dripping with sweat and smothered with filth - no, go down the mines instead, my son*, you won't regret it. Ha, satire. Oh, call me a cynical old tosspot if you like, I shan't care - I guess basically I've just grown disillusioned with everything, that's all. This morning, for instance, we finally got The Sugargliders second EP back from the pressing-plant, and of course they've printed the labels the wrong colours, and, as ever, we're completely powerless to get it PUT RIGHT - we can shout at them till we're blue in the face (or process-yellow in their case, presumably) and the most we'll ever get is a credit-note for the label-printing, or a 10% discount; and we try explaining to them about ART and BEAUTY and HEY, POPMUSIC and (just for the Hell of it) HEY, CURRENT ANARCHO-SYNDICALIST THINKING - but they just shrug and say hey, it's only a bloody record-middle, fatsos, it just goes round and round.

But there you go, that's people for you - you'll have seen them around, cluttering up the streets, buying Ride LPs, stepping out onto zebra crossings without looking - somebody even wrote the other day to say that nobody honestly cared that we'd used the wrong background picture for our SARAH 65 ~~LEAFLET~~ - and, deep down in my heart of hearts, I suspect she could well be right... And basically what it comes down to is that if we can't have perfection and no-one else gives a damn anyway then... well, we might as well not bother, because it's all a bit soul-destroying... Not as soul-destroying as something like Eugenius or Superstar, obviously, but they're extremes. No, life is merely a constant trickle of minor disappointments, nothing terribly exciting.

Of course, othertimes when I lay a-bed at night I'm visited by giant green butterflies with hang-ups when asked ex-girlfriends, but that's another story, and nowhere near as instructive, or interesting.

* I can't remember if I'm right in saying that women still aren't allowed to work down the mines - something somewhere makes me think that that rule has just been repealed... hum, can't be sure. But who knows what floodgates may have been opened if so - why, they'll be letting them play lead-guitar or work the knobs in the studio next... God I'm in a funny mood this evening... but maybe you are too?
