Time for a few words about our new labels. To begin with, those of you not actually from Bristol probably aren't aware that this spring saw the grand re-opening of Castle Park - nowadays just a patch of landscaped grass and flower-beds tucked between the harbour and the new Galleries shopping-centre, but once-upon-a-time the very heart of our city, for here stood Bristol Castle, beneath whose mighty walls medieval Bristol grew...

... and now they've dug it up again; or what remains, which isn't much, to be honest - a bit of rampart, the odd porch, a few hollowed steps - but they've improvised the rest so splendidly that I for one have no complaint; striding heroically along the windswept parapets I shield my eyes from the stinging rain, gaze out pensively from the watch-tower, and, oblivious to the buzz of traffic in the moat below, see once again marauding hoards sweep up the slope from Pizza Hut and the office equipment shop - though it would've been something else then, of course, medieval people tending not to have offices as such.

And, amid much feasting, jousting and medieval hat-making, it was all opened by The Lord Mayor of Bristol this very May, and we're joining in the celebrations with these next 10 labels. We begin, fittingly, with a view along the castle ramparts, with The Galleries just behind.
