Um, sorry if this turns out a bit rushed and garbled, but we're off to Berwick-on-Tweed in a few hours - just a holiday, nothing serious (October's cheaper than August, in much the same way that Berwick-on-Tweed's cheaper than Torquay or The Scilly Isles. Or Knossos.) - and if we don't get this to the printers' before we go it won't be ready when we get back and then all hell will break loose.

Ah - it's suddenly occurred to me that, along with all the things one is supposed to do before going on holiday, things like turning off the gas and having a word with the milkman (which we've done, not that he seemed particularly interested; probably because he knows we always buy our milk in Kwik Save but, hell, I'm a stickler for etiquette and these old rituals ought to be observed, otherwise they'll die out; think of your grandchildren) - um - yes, what one is supposed NOT to do is tell complete strangers that one is going. Otherwise they will burgle you. And smear excrement on your walls. But - I don't know, I just find it hard to think of you in that way; one of the pluses of us being small, unhip and loathed by millions is that we can pretty much name all the people who buy our records, pretty much tell you where they all live. You, for instance, I could tell you where you live; but I shan't, as you almost certainly know. What I will say is: I think you should re-assess the sparkly top, go easy on the eye-liner, and play hard-to-get next Friday.

Also, the cat has a gun and isn't afraid to use it.
