74 Well, we've now reached possibly the highlight of our trip - the gorgeous new Lloyds Bank HQ at the bottom of St. Augustine's Reach, a lovely pale grey crescent of stone and glass with waterside amphitheatre out front - a rather fine outdoor venue, it must be said, and scene already of many impressive shows by such indie-pop luminaries as - well, Shirley Bassey and Barbara Dickson, actually, but I'm sure it's only a matter of time - never let it be said that Bristol City Council Arts & Amenities Department aren't one funky bunch of hip swinging dudes... sigh... incidentally, I'm worrying that these photos are a bit too small... I know that for some of you your eyesight isn't what it was... but then - what is? I'm certainly not. Neither of us are, in fact, and nor is the cat. Ah, but head off down that road and you get to pondering all sorts of imponderables - death, the after-life, the general pointlessness of everything given that despite millions of years of supposed evolution Oasis can still be Number One and you know I was standing in the warehouse beside 90,000 copies of their LP last week and it would've been so easy to, um, I don't know, hide them or something... and then at least when I did die I could float seraphically up to heaven or wherever safe in the knowledge that I'd had all my sins nullified by that one simple act of goodness and that as long as nobody looked under my bed the world would be vaguely more enjoyable... but I didn't and I'm sorry.
