Right: our next label photo shows the steps at Baltic 'harf - we're now about a mile downstream from the city-centre and... and... getting increasingly bored with the whole business, so be honest with you... oh, it seemed like a good idea when we began, a trip-round-the-harbour, but - there's really just buggar all to say about most of these places... it's just bits of water with maybe the odd boat bobbing about in the background somewhere if you're lucky. Oh look a seagull! Aark aark. See what I mean? Sigh. Although, having said that, in the background here you've got the terraces of Cliftonwood, which are actually rather lovely, I've always thought - pink and white cottages tumbling down the hill like, um, marshmallows... or slabs of coconut-ice... the woman across the road from us when I was small used to make coconut-ice for the Labour Party, and that was always pink and white slabs... she's dead now... in a way, it's probably for the best, she was a staunch Wilson-ite and I reckon she'd be turning in her grave at the thought of young Tony Blair chomping her sweetmeats... everything changes, nobody cares... I'm not even sure how well you can see these cottages anyway... I regret now not having done the photos bigger... but then, life is all regret. Shall I do my seagull impersonation again? Aark aark. Good, huh? Oh, so you. Maybe it'd be better if you could see me doing the actions... flap... flap... flap...
