

Those of you familiar with our handy and amusing inserts might be forgiven for thinking that they've lately started to degenerate, with the bulk of them now being given over to mail-order rather than amusing anecdotes about department-stores and squirrels. And I can't deny it: although a hugely swelling roster is always something to be proud of, just occasionally the sheer length and bulk of it can mean it starts getting in the way. But don't worry; now that our oeuvre has, indeed, bloated to quite eye-watering proportions, a re-design is well underway, and soon that feeling of letdown on getting nothing for your money but a couple of crap popsongs and a thinly veiled demand for more cash should be a thing of the past. So look out for that next time. For now - and before I run out of space - there's these two squirrels walking down Oxford Street, and one turns to the other and says
